French Begin Attempt to Block U.S. Flights to Back Controllers

From Agency Dispatches

PARIS - The two major unions of French air traffic controllers called on their members to begin blocking U.S.-bound traffic at noon Sunday, but airliners continued to depart by filing flight plans for Canada

The National Union of Air Traffic Controllers (SNCTA) and the French Democratic Confederation of Labor (CFDT), which represent 67 percent of France's controllers, issued a joint appeal to their memberships Sunday to deny take-off authority for all U.S. bound flights and to deny other flights heading for the United States the right to penetrate French airspace. An SNCTA spokesman said the action, designed to support striking U.S. controllers, also was a security measure because the French controllers believe conditions in the U.S. are now unsafe.

Pan Am's only Paris-New York flight took off with its usual flight plan, an airline spokesman in New York said, but a Rome-New York flight was forced to change its flight plan to Halifax in order to receive permission to pass through French airspace. In New Zealand, controllers imposed a ban on all civil flights to the United States. The ban in-volved three flights on Sunday, one of Air New Zealand and two involving Pan Am.

A spokesman for the French Ministry of Transport said a number of aircraft heading for the United States from other points had been denied permission to enter French airspace. Some U.S.-bound flights from the Paris airports of Orly and Charles de Gaulle were delayed during the afternoon, sometimes for several hours, but none was canceled, airline spokesmen said.

As both the government and the air controllers held fast to their conflicting positions in the labor dispute that began last Monday, the FAA announced that dismissal notices had been sent to 6,660 of the 12,000 striking members of the Professional Air Traffie Controll-

Discussions in 1978 about their future deployment led to strains in U.S. relations with European allies and to popular fear in Europe that such weapons were more likely to be used than the immensely destruc-tive nuclear weapons available

Mr. Reagan reportedly said that any future deployment in Europe would be done only after full con-sultation with the allies.

Administration officials, who asked not to be identified, said Saturday that the decision came at a meeting of the new National Se-curity Planning Group, an infor-mal version of the National Security Council, where Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and NATO sources in Brussels said President Reagan's decision had not been the subject of formal negotiations in the alliance. As long as the warheads were to be stockpiled only in the United States, the decision remained a national issue, and Washington had no obligation to consult NATO, the sources said. The U.S. said Saturday there were no plans at present to deploy the weapons in Europe. Any such move would almost certainly involve full-scale NATO negotiations, the sources said.

The meetings this week will be against a backdrop of rising Soviet concern over the wave of protests. Included in that wave were a 50hour blockade by buses and trucks in central Warsaw last week and a four-hour strike Friday in Poland's Silesia coal and steel belt, which

Royal Visit May Speed Gibraltar Solution

By R.W. Apple Jr. New York Times Service MADRID - The honeymoon visit by the Prince and Princess of Wales to Gibraltar last week may hasten rather than delay a solution to the dispute over the Rock, which has bedeviled relations between Britain and Spain for dec-

French Said To Be Calm In Tehran

The Associated Press BEIRUT - French citizens in Tehran, on the eve of their anticipated departure, were calmly preparing Sunday night for their flight bome and were "definitely not afraid" despite the souring of France's relations with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime, one

Frenchman said. Diplomatic sources in Tehran said there were "no hitches" thus far in the repatriation plan. The Frenchman, a businessman who was contacted by telephone from Beirut at his home in Tehran, said most of the 144 French citizens in Iran were leaving the coun-try "with regret and not by choice."

With Iran's displeasure over France's refusal to extradite former Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr apparently growing, President Francois Mitterrand ordered French residents in Iran to return home and recalled Ambassador Guy Georgy for consulta-tions. The former Iranian head of state escaped to Paris on July 29 after seven weeks as a fugitive in his own country, where hard-line Islamic fundamentalists were de-manding his trial and execution.

'No Animosity'

The French businessman, who asked not to be identified by name, said about 50 members of the French community in Tehran planned to rendezvous at the Mehrabad Airport on Monday morning to board the Iran Air called "the need that America's unlimited support to Israel be stopped.

But in outlining what he de-scribed as a seven-point peace plan, the Saudi leader appeared to make a tacit recognition of Israel's right to exist, calling for "recogni-uon of the right of all states in the region to live in peace."

Details of Plan

In his plan, Prince Fahd called for Israeli withdrawal from Arab territory occupied after the 1967 war, including Arab areas of Jerusalem; removal of all settlements that Israel has set up in oc-cupied territories since 1967; recognition of the rights of Palestinians to repatriation, and compensation to those who choose not to return; and the establishment of an independent Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital.

These conditions would not ap-pear to be palatable to the Israeli government under Prime Minister Menahem Begin.

The crown prince also called for the guarantee of freedom of worship in the Holy Land and the placing of the West Bank under UN sponsorship for a brief transitional period. The Saudi statement appeared designed to emphasize the prime importance placed by even the moderate Arab states on the Palestinian question, rather than the threat of Soviet expansionism that the Reagan administration boped would be the railying point of its

Middle East policy. The statement said that the Saudi Arabians had helped to arrange the truce in southern Lebanon to "save innocent lives of men, womeach other, the action amounted to en and children from falling under "implicit recognition" and was "a the Israeli military machine." Occasional Crack

Earlier in the weekend, observers said the embassy building was shuttered and its doors closed, except for an occasional crack in the gate to admit some French citizens who slipped inside the central Tehran compound to await their departure.

The French operator who answered the telephone at the embassy on Sunday refused to comment on the situation or put through calls to the diplomatic staff. She referred inquiries to the the External Relations Ministry in Paris.

Sixty-two French citizens were stranded at the Tehran airport last Thursday and prevented from boarding two Air France planes sent to evacuate them. Iranian officials claimed they had to make sure none of those departing had any unpaid taxes or other outstanding financial obligations.

The French businessman, who said he was in charge of a French-Iranian firm that he declined to name, indicated that most of the evacuees planned to return to Iran eventually.

"You know we have already been evacuated twice before, when the Iran-Iraq war broke out and after the U.S. hostage crisis when Britain temporarily closed its embassy. We all came back." he said.

Ominous Note

Iran has announced that the French citizens were under Iranian protection. An Iranian clergyman, however, sounded an ominous note when he threatened to do to the French what Iran had done to the Americans, referring to the 1979 takcover of the U.S. Emhassy in Tehran and the holding of 52 U.S. hostages for 14 months.

Next Step

"Let us build on this and not waste any time, so we can achieve the next step which is, in my idea, the mutual and simultaneous recognition of both parties together." Mr. Sadat said.

In the text of his Georgetown speech, Mr. Sadat said that he saw parallels between his own decision to open a dialogue with Israel in 1977 and the current situation. "We bad to demonstrate that seace between the Arab states and Israel, peace between the Palestinistrongest reality in the Middle East, no matter what roadblocks we have to surmount, because the formidable barriers of fear and distrust have started to crack." Mr. Sadat said.

Advancement Seen He said that "we will advance, block by block." The first step, be said, was the peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

Now, he said, "we are asking all nations of the world to talk to the Palestinian people and their representatives, endorsing every ceasefire and encouraging a more stable Middle East, telling both the Palestinian people and the Israeli people that they should sit together and talk together to settle their problems without shooting out their grievances." The United States, during Mr.

saying, however, that deployment would be another matter.

Leading Dutch defense special-ists described President Reagan's decision as a worrying move. Spe-cialists from the Labor and Christian Democratic parties said they were worried that the decision, coming in the face of express European opposition to the warhead, was a sign that the U.S. government was deciding foreign policy without taking its NATO allies into account.

"The Americans might well say the warhead will be stockpiled in the U.S. But it's a short-range weapon designed for use here and not there. We think precision-guid-ed, nonnuclear, anti-tank missiles are a better answer to Soviet tanks," Christian Democratic defense specialist Ton Frinking said.

Norway Premier Gro Harlem Brundtland said Sunday that Norway was opposed to production of the neutron warhead and expressed her disappointment at President Reagan's decision to build the new weapon.

Los Angeles Times Service COZUMEL, Mexico - President Fidel Castro of Cuba has promised not to stand in the way of a coming summit meeting of 22 rich and poor na-tions, even though Cuba is excluded from the talks.

The agreement represents a minor diplomatic triumph for President José López Portillo of Mexico, who is attempting to reconcile his country's ardent pro-Cuban foreign policy with his administration's growing friendship with the United States.

After private conversations between the two leaders, Mr. Castro and Mr. Lopez Portillo issued a declaration Saturday in which Mr. Castro "expressed his disposition to liberate those commiss friendly to Cuba that are committed to these negotiations of any moral responsibility to which they might feel inclined as a result of Cuba's absence [from the summit meeting]."

The statement added, however, that Cuba reserved the right to express its point of view at a later date "on the reasons that have given origin to that absence."

Less Than Satisfied

Thus, Cuba announced that it had not said its last word on the subject and appeared to be less than satisfied with its exclusion from the so-called North-South talks at the Mexican resort of Cancón, in October.

The talks are an effort by Third World countries to pressure industrial nations into restructuring the international economic order so that it is

U.S. diplomats have said that Cuba's presence would be a disruptive factor, while the island nation's supporters contend that, as the leader of the nonaligned countries, Havana is a logical participant and should not be excluded.

"Long Process"

Mr. López Portillo explained to Mr. Castro "the long process of negotiations that has made these [October] talks possible," according to the communique read by Carlos Rafael Rodrignez, the Cuban vice president.

The insistence of Mexico and other countries upon Cuba's presence, the statement went on, "would mean the cancellation of the meeting, given-the well-known position of the United States, to the detriment of the negotiation process between developing countries and those already de-veloped, to which Fidel Castro has contributed so much

Just a few days before that session, the 11 de veloping countries that were invited held a meeting of their own in New York at which the absence of Cuba was a main topic, Although Mexico raised the Cuban issue and suggested that Cuba might be invited as an observer, none of the other Third World countries seconded the move.

Compromise Reagan Drops Nominee for Dublin Envoy Is Reached

By Bernard Gwertzman New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - President Reagan has decided to drop his plans to nominate William E. McCann, a New Jersey insurance executive, as the next ambassador to Ireland, administration officials have said.p The president was reported to be boping instead-to nominate a prominent Republican lumber executive from Oregon for the Dublin post.

The officials said Mr. McCann, an Irish-American who had been national chairman of the Reagan-Bush Pioneers in 1980, was being dropped because his company had been linked to Louis C. Ostrer, a convicted tax evader.

Mr. McCann, of Short Hills, N.J., is president of Foundation Life Insurance of America, in Chatham, N.J. He has said there was nothing improper in his company's relations with Mr. Ostrer, who was sentenced last Dec. 15 to-20 years in jail for failing to pay taxes on $6.8 million in income. Mr. Reagan first announced his plans to nominate Mr. McCann to the Dublin post last St. Patrick's Day, when he visited the Irish Embassy and brought along Mr. McCann. On March 17, the White House issued a press release confirming the president's intention to name him. But the formal submission of Mr. McCann's name never was sent to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The operation Saturday had been ordered by two Appeal Court judges Friday after the baby had been made a ward of court by Hammersmith Council because of the parents' refusal to allow the operation. The parents believed that nature had provided a chance to end a life deformed from birth, their lawyer said.

Doctors had testified that without the operation the baby would live a week. But they warned that the surgery itself could lead to a heart condition that would bring her death within a month.

The responses may differ, but the problem is the same --- the increasing value of the U.S. dollar. For some foreigners, the dol-lar is costlier than it has been in more than 20 years. That is a blessing for Americans traveling abroad. But for governments that have diplomatic, trade and cultural offices here, with. budgets and salaries calculated in their national currencies, exchange rates are forcing some to tighten belts. "I've already lost 25 percent of my funds," said Gerhard J. Wind, an administrative attache at the Austrian Mission to the United Nations.

So the mission is trying to cut back on phone bills, which, Mr. Wind said, is "a hard thing to do." It is also trying to decrease paper copying, postage and other expenses. As an example of how the rising dollar has hit.

Mr. Wind said that the mission had paid its $7,000-a-month rent with 99,700 schillings in January. In July it took 118,000 schillings. This month it is up to 122,500 schillings.

Mr. Wind's problems are typi-cal of those of some other diplomatic offices here. An informal survey of more than a half-dozen consulates, missions and press and cultural centers showed that the industrialized nations are struck first by rising exchange rates because their currencies are readily convertible into dollars and because office expenses and salaries are paid from their foreign capitals in local currency and must he exchanged for dol-

The Reagan administration came to office with two major objectives: reforming the U.S. economy and confronting Soviet adventurism with a strengthened alliance. But the monetarist methods chosen to achieve the first objective are now impeding the allied contributions to the second. The contradiction has been obscured by the administration's cuphoria over its economic victories in Congress. Perhaps for that very reason, Chancellor Schmidt of West Germany chose recently to focus attention on it hy announcing a cut in military spend-ing and hlaming it on high U.S. interest rates. Europe's recession, he said, made it unlikely that any NATO country except the United States could meet its pledge of increasing military spending hy a real 3 percent a year.

Defense Secretary Weinberger, feigning surprise, expressed regret and disappointment. But the West German hudget cuts were discussed privately at the Ottawa summit meeting, where White House aides acknowledged that their economic policy had been formed without seriously considering or consulting the allies.

Even hefore Ottawa. bowever, President Mitterrand of France warned that "one cannot hope for more political and military cohesion in the Atlantic alliance and be content with an every-man-for-himself attitude in economics.

The French complaint goes heyond high U.S. interest rates, which hamper efforts to stimulate Europe's economy. Because Europe pays for oil in dollars that have soared value, it has experienced a "third oil shock" in prices for all goods. And Washing-ton's refusal to join the Europeans in interventions to support their currencies hroke two decades of allied monetary cooperation.

Much more than such coordination will he lost if the United States insists on going its own way for very long. The daily contacts of allied treasuries and central hankers through repeated currency crises have created a valuable intimacy, equaled only in NATO's integrated military commands. When the defense bills come in, it is the finance ministers who have to find the funds to pay them.

The massive military huildup hegun hy the Reagan administration is already being reexamined for economies. So if Soviet military power is to be matched, contributions from NATO and Japan are essential. They will not be obtained from countries beset by declining production, high unemployment and shrinking living standards.

An Oily Kiss for Mom and Pop

Perhaps you have acquired an impression that the current U.S. tax bill contains gross, disproportionate and unwarranted hreaks for oil producers. Sen. Robert J. Dole, a Republican from Kansas, wishes to correct that impression. Those tax breaks will not benefit concentrated wealth, he indignantly assured the Senate the other day. They are only intended to give a helping hand to the "Mom and Pop" independents.

Some Mom. Some Pop. Some $2 billion a year in tax reductions for people and corporations whose oil properties are already bringing them far more than they ever had any reason to expect,

There's nothing to be done about it now, for the bill has been passed by both houses and is on its way to the president. But the oiltax reductions deserve special notice and denunciation as not merely had policy but a betrayal.

The oil windfall tax was part of an explicit bargain that led to the decontrol of oil prices. President Carter was right to begin decontrolling oil, but he was also right to think that some of the enormous wealth generated by that decision ought to be returned to the public. Congress accepted that principle and, in early 1980, enacted it into law. Now, a year and a half later, decontrol is complete, and consumers are paying sharply higher prices. But the producers are trying to back was no less favorable to the producers than the Republicans' in the Senate.

This reduction of some $2 billion a year in the windfall tax is relatively small in relation to the total revenues that the tax collects more than $20 billion this year, and larger amounts projected in the future. But the present retreat sets a precedent of faithlessness that makes you wonder how long the rest of the tax is going to be in effect.

To judge the need for this relaxation, you might recall that in the spring of 1979, when Mr. Carter first proposed the windfall tax, the uncontrolled world price of oil was $15 a barrel. Because of the Iranian revolution, it is now $35. If it is newly discovered oil, the windfall tax is now around $4 a barrel. You will observe that the current price to the producer, even after the windfall tax, is twice the before-tax top price at the time Mr. Carter laid before Congress' the tax-and-decontrol bargain.

Equity is not the only reason for the windfall tax. It was also designed to slow down, in a modest degree, the flow of wealth into the oil industry from every other sector of U.S. business.

With the price increases of the past two years, that flow is running at a much higher level than anyone could have expected in early 1979. The sums of money being recklessly thrown into the struggle for Conoco, for example, have reached a scale requiring any thoughtful person, including thoughtful persons in the Reagan administration, to wonder whether this is the moment to reduce taxes on oil production.

Price Support

Why should not the importance of tobacco price supports to Sen. Helms, Sen. Thurmond and others be a factor in such battles? Even Mr. Reagan, who in a farewell interview with The Washington Star has finally come out for a 10-year renewal of the Voting Rights Act, might want to think about that.

Standing alone, and despite tbe strictures of some nonsmokers, the tobacco pro-gram is amply justified. It's true that a contradiction seems to exist between the government's health warnings and its aid to tobacco farmers. But that aid has little if anything to do with

The price-support program does not, however, stand alone. It's part of the interplay of economic interests that dominates politics, and as such it's fair game for those with other interests. Such a narrowly based program, in any case, is always dependent on trade-offs, compromises and coalition with other interests.

So those whose votes will be needed for renewal of tobacco price supports have every right and plenty of reason to drive hard bargains on other legislation. If the positions were reversed, no one would do so more ruthlessly than Sen. Helms, who should know that swords cut more ways than one.

"Don't worry, they all speak English" is the sentence with which most native-born Americans are sent abroad. Raised in a smaller, less powerful country, one might feel impelled to learn other languages. Raised in the United States, one assumes that English is a universally accepted form of Esperanto.

Only it's not. For the ordinary tourist, not knowing the language is only a nuisance; for the merchant or diplomat it can be tantamount to disaster. The latter also run the risk of looking foolish: The Latin American advertising of one U.S. fountain-pen manufacturer proclaimed in Spanish that his product was a contraceptive as well. Or incompetent: Allen Kassof, an expert in international scholarly exchanges, reports that not one of the more than 70 staff members of the Pentagon's European Division speaks German or French.

Such linguistic arrogance, however, is giving way to enlightened bumility. A survey conducted hy the Modern Language Association shows more colleges reinstating some foreign language study for admission and for graduation - requirements dropped, along with a host of others, during the student rebellions of the 1960s. The start is promising hut the road is, as yet, uphill. Thanks to the '60s definition of "relevance," fewer than 4 percent of current public school graduates have had more than two years of foreign language study.

The resurgence of interest in the study of Latin has a pragmatic base - people with a hackground in Latin do better on standardized tests because they have a firmer foundation in English. And as any survivor of, say, Commentarii de bello Gallico will tell you, they can also read the beadlines in French, Italian and Spanish newspapers and find translating old tomhstones more challenging than the best crossword puzzles.

Languages are, of course, keys. It's more than about time that the walled-up American learned to use them again.

A Miracle Worker

Six months into his presidency ... Ronald Reagan is a miracle worker.

Look hack two years at the established verities of American political life. That the Democrats were the natural party of government. That senior citizens were fit only for Sun City. That the federal juggernaut had a momentum of its own. That the president himself was a man without real power or influence to shape events.

Then look at it today. Mr. Reagan is 70; though his party is outnumbered in the House of Representatives, he has scattered the Democrats in humiliation and distress. The Republicans now seem the natural party of almost everything, and the president himself, benignly lecturing the nation, is a seemingly irresistible force the controversial third-ranking official in Prime Minister Robert G. Mugabe's ruling party, has been fired from his party position, completing the political demise of the former minister who killed a white farmer a year ago.

Mr. Tekere, looking haggard, said Saturday that he had been removed from his post as secretarygeneral of the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU), thus confirming rumors that had been circulating in Salisbury for days.

Mr. Mugabe fired Mr. Tekere, 44, as minister of manpower plan-ning and development last lamary, a month after he was freed ona technicality at the end of his murder trial. Until now, however, Mr. Tekere still ranked behind only Mr. Mugabe and Deputy Prime Minister Simon Muzenda within the party, which is techni-cally superior to the government.

Mr. Tekere has frequently denanded that the process of change be quickened and that white con-trol of the economy be curtailed. He is a longtime enemy of Mr. Mugabe's coalition partner, Joshua Nkomo, who he said should be "crushed."

When Mr. Tekere spoke Saturday to a party raily at the Univer-sity of Zimbabwe, where he is popular among students, he was introduced as secretary-general of the party and made no direct reference to his removal. Pressure Called Necessary

"There is only one real key to the settlement of the Namibian conflict and that is South Africa.' Rep. Wolpe said. So, he added, "it becomes important for the United States to put maximum pressure on South Africa."

The United States has taken the lead in a Western effort to bring independence to the territory. Washington has made several concessions to South Africa in an effort to gain a settlement.

The administration, he said, has offered to increase the number of South African military attaches and accept honorary consular officials and has started training Pre-tona's coast guard. The South Africans did not even request the attachés or consular officials, he

"It is unfortunate those kind of positive initiatives were offered without any quid pro quo," Rep. Wolpe said.

So far, he said, "the South Africans have swallowed the carrot whole and asked for more. I cannot point to a single specific piece of svidence, however small, that indicates South Africa is willing to cooperate with the Namibia pro-

If there are no tangible results in the Namibia negotiations in the next few months, he said, the U.S. position in black Africa will deteriorate substantially. He pointed to the possibility of crosion of African support for U.S. policy at the United Nations over such issues as the Middle East and Afghanistan and added that use of the oil weapon by Nigeria, the second largest supplier to the United States, should not be ruled out.

NEW YORK - Byron Price, 90, a reporter and editor who was the United States' Director of Censorship in World War II and an assistant secretary-general of the United Nations in charge of ad-ministrative and budgetary affairs, died Thursday after a heart attack at his home in Hendersonville, N.C.

Mr. Price had been with The Associated Press for nearly 30 years and was the news agency's executive news editor when President with the constitutional freedom of the press. He prepared and administered a largely voluntary regulatory code. The censorship code was widely praised by the press. Yet, with it, Mr. Price's office kept secret such critical Allied plans as the 1942 invasion of North Africa, the precise time and place of the 1944 D-Day invasion of Normandy and the successful effort to develop the first atomic bomb. In 1942, Mr. Price described censorship as a military weapon that is "a necessary evil" in time of total war. His office, he said, tried to avoid restrictions so strict that they would keep Americans igno-rant of the progress of the war.

For his achievement, he received the Medal of Merit from President Harry S. Traman, was named an honorary Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire and was awarded a special Pulitzer citation. He also received honorary citation. He also received honorary degrees from leading colleges. After the war, Mr. Price, who was widely respected an an even-handed, canny and unflappable administrator, became the ranking U.S. member of the United Na-tions Secretariat. From 1947 to 1956 he was a major figure in the 1954, he was a major figure in the move from Lake Success, Long Island, to the permanent headquar-ters on Manhattan's East Side.

As a reporter a generation earli-er, he had covered the bitter debase in the Senate over the Versailles Treaty and the League of Nations. He was also with Woodrow Wilson on the transcontinental speaking tour in which the president tried in vain to rally pub-

Industry Harnesses Water's Cutting Edge

By Barnaby J. Feder New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Peering into the Grand Canyon or even surveying the damage a wave inflicts on a sand-castle wall, a person may be impressed by the corrosive power water, but one is unlikely to think of it as a finely honed scapel. Nevertheless, the rapidly growing: list of water jets for cutting, trimming, and drilling suggests that the step from croding natural or man-made structures to defily carving them up is not a large one. The basic challenge in building a water jet is to concentrate the force in a stream of water on a very small space and to increase it by using high pressure. The pumps, piping, nozzles and pressure inten-sifiers to do just that have been around for decades.

Unfortunately, the same hy-draulic force that slices through wood, textiles, plastics and so forth also attacks the water jet's components. Until relatively recently, the destruction of crucial seals, valves and cylinders in highpressure water jets was so rapid that the devices were impractical as industrial cutting tools. In the past decade, that problem has been yielding to advances in materials science and controls, and in improved understanding of how water behaves under high pressure. When Flow Industries, a privately held company in Kent, Wash., began marketing systems in 1974, they usually required maintenance every 40 to 50 hours, according to John Chung, president of the com-pany's technology development subsidiary. Now, the most frequent maintenance operation ----seal replacement - occurs every 500 hours.

Major Barrier

Such engineering progress has allowed manufacturers to focus on the real barrier to widespread use of water jet cutters, the lack of supporting systems to effectively adapt them to a variety of tasks. A cutting device, like any other ma-chine tool, is useless to a manufacturer if it cannot be integrated into the assembly line and conveniently and reliably controlled.

is less important than the variety of uses to which they are being

There are perhaps 500 water jet cutting installations in the United States, Japan and Western Europe, Significantly, the two leading producers, Flow and McCartney Manufacturing, a Baxter Springs, Kan., subsidiary of Ingersoll-Rand, said that sales of systems, cost from $50,000 to which $500,000 or more, have been strong in the past two years despite the economic slowdown in the United States and Europe. In fact, McCarmey, which is credited with marketing the first commercial water jet cutters in 1971, said that sales doubled last year, although it. declined to say what the totals

Moreover, the companies added, the number of devices sold to date pert. Products as diverse as cakes, diapers, corrugated board, fiberglass insulation, brake linings, aircraft components and dashboards are all being cut with water jets, they said.

Supersonic Speed

"We are not really sure how fast this market can grow," said John Hannon, marketing manager for McCartney. "The potential is there to impact on a large cross section of industry - everything except metal."

metal." The key component in both Flow and McCartney's devices is the intensifier. The intensifier is built around a piston, which is driven back and forth by oil injected into the chamber by an electric pump. Plungers are attached to both sides of the piston. They are driven into champers on either side of the piston chamber, displacing water. The pressure of the oil on the surface of the piston is thus concentrated and the water is pushed out the small openings on either side.

As a result, water emerges at a pressure 20 times that of the oil, or up to 60,000 pounds per square inch. An accumulator is added to provide an even flow out of the nozzle, which would be impossible if the water came straight from its confrontation with the reciprocating piston. The nozzle, usually sapphire-tipped, further concentrates The water is traveling at speeds up to twice the speed of sound when it hits the cutting surface. ny willing to work with them. The latter course is probably the

Both Flow and the device and its components is relatively straightforward, the en-gineering problems are formidable. "There are not very many people other manufacturers.

One outgrowth of this is that the water jet producers have to design and build the support systems that will make the device attractive to potential users. Or they have to find another machine tool compa-

Libya Reportedly Studies Price Cut

OPEC Members Say Emergency Meeting Scheduled for Aug. 19

NEW YORK - Libya is apparently seeking ways to lower the price of its crude without cutting the official price, Western oil com-pany officials say. At the same time, OPEC oil ministers will hold an emergency meeting Aug. 19 to discuss the oil glut and prices, according to reports from Kuwait and Jakarta Abdel-Rabman al-Awadi, Kuwait's acting government spokesman, said Sunday after a Cabinet meeting, that all OPEC members will attend the ministerial talks. He said the site of the conference would be Geneva.

The report follows an announce ment earlier in the day in Jakarta by an official close to Indonesian Mines and Energy Minister Subro-to, the OPEC chairman, that the meeting would take place either in Geneva or Vienna.

Libya, meanwhile, has apparent-ly told Western oil companies to try to find ways that it can effectively cut oil prices without taking the politically difficult step of re-ducing the official selling price, ac-cording to a report by Douglas Martin of The New York Times. Officials of some large oil com-panies said Friday that they had not yet received a full report on discussions, however, and could not confirm details. Others

The companies had feared the meeting would turn into a stormy confrontation, with Libya pressing the companies to buy more of its high-priced oil and the companies in turn arguing that Libya must cut its official price of $40 a barrel. But the mood was reported to have been amicable.

An official of a European oil company said, "We were asked for suggestions on how the Libyan government could keep official prices unchanged, and at the same time still give our companies a discount.

World Bank Praises Developing Countries For Surmounting 'Convulsions' of the '70s

By Hobart Rowen Washington Post Service WASHINGTON — Except for the poorest of the poor nations, the world's developing countries came through the economic "convul-sions" of the 1970s in surprisingly good shape, leading to a bope that the scorecard for the 1980s will be no worse than the past decade "and may indeed be somewhat better

That is one of the key conclusions of the fourth annual World Development Report, published over the weekend by the World Bank. It was completed in the final stages of Robert S. McNamara's presidency of the bank, which end-ed on June 30.

This year's report is designed to examine the international economy itself, and how the individual developing countries have adjusted to changes brought about by external factors. Chief among these are the problems caused by recessions in the richer industrial nations, $30-million, five-year note issue. and by high oil prices imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

In essence, the report found that the rich nations, the OPEC group, as well as the "middle income" developing countries with a per capita income over $370 survived the pressures well, but that those below the $370 per capita mark are "being left behind, and [are] facing a further deterioration in their prospects

Better Growth

In fact, she said, the developing countries as a group had a better growth record in the 1970s than did the industrial countries, and had achieved "remarkable" success in improving their ability to feed their populations. India, especial-ly, was cited for a "dramatic change" in achieving self-sufficiency in agriculture. "It shows that development assistance does work," Ms. Hughes said, "and without sounding selfserving, we would like to take some credit for it."

On the other hand, there was plenty in the report itself to support the "half-empty" description, especially in projections for eco-nomic growth in the 1980s. The outlook for economic growth in the industrial countries was labeled as "somewbat worse" than was projected in last year's report. And for the low-income countries, average per capita incomes were projected to grow at only 0.7 percent a year under a pessimistic scenario, or 1.8 percent under an optimistic scenario.

"Both the relative and the absolute gaps between the richest and poorest countries will widen in

The Saudi Arabian businessman also favors U.S. equities. Indeed, 62-year-old Mr. Olayan is generally believed to be the biggest pri-vate Sandi investor in U.S. business with hefty holdings in energy companies, railroads, ntilities and banks, among others. Aithough Mr. Olayan shies from discussing financial specifics, it is a measure of his portfolio that about a year ago he hired a former U.S. Treasury secretary, William E. Simon, to manage it. Says Mr. Olayan of his reasons for hiring Mr. Simon: "As Treasury secretary, Mr. Simon was familiar with . Saudi Arabia because of the tremendous financial movement we have there. And 1 saw Mr. Simon as a loyal and dedicated son of Wall Street, so he was no stranger to this environment."

Mr. Simon's title is deputy chairman of Olayan Investments Co. Establishment, a Lichtensteinregistered parent company that oversees the Olayan family interests and has annual revenue of about $500 million. Chief among Mr. Simon's responsibilities is run-ning OICE's Crescent Diversified, a British Virgin Islands company whose impressive equity holdings include 1 percent of Chase Manhattan, the largest single interest in the holding company next to Da-vid Rockefeller.

The Olayan interests have undis-closed investments in U.S. real eslate.

OICE, with its tiny staff, operates from spartan but tastefully decorated quarters on Park Avenue in Manhattan. Its other centers of operations are London and Athens, where it moved from Leb-anon in 1976.

Appropriately, OICE's office here is housed in a building con-structed in the 1940s by the old Arabian American Oil Co., which has since moved from New York to what it considers the more philisophically agreeable atmosphere of Houston, Mr. Olayan credits the benevolence of Aramco with givine him a start.

The son of a spice merchant, Mr. Olayan was born in the town of Onaizah, 250 miles northeast of the capital city of Riyadh. Educated in Bahrain, Mr. Olayan returned to Saudi Arabia in 1937 and went to work as a truck dispatcher for the Aramco fleet of vehicles. Judging by his curriculum vitae, the Americans apparently spotted Olayan as a native comer, for he was given increasing respon-sibilities, including the job of liai-son with the Saudi government.

Tom Barger, the former chairman of Aramco, now retired and living in Southern California, said during a phone interview that be met Mr. Olayan in about 1945, and Mr. Barger recalled with a laugh that Mr. Olayan was making about 53 or 54 a day. Mr. Barger said that Aramco had a policy of letting the more promising Arab employees take a year off to try to set up a business of their own. "We wanted to build up the local economy, realizing it

"But most of the low-income countries have participated bardly at all in the growth of world trade or in the growth of world trade or in the growing 'South-South' trade among developing countries: This is part of the explanation for their current plight." The report also concluded that the poorest coun-tries will oot benefit much from trade unless they simultaneously get help on other fronts.

Familiar Story

On energy, the story is the familiar one relating to the massive adverse impact of high oil prices, About 40 percent of the increase in exports by the developing countries has in effect been wiped out by the higher costs of imported oil. Yet, the bigger problems may lie shead, the report suggests, because until 1978, higher oil prices had only a modest impact on economic growth.

The subsequent second oil shock of 1979-80, however, "has pro-duced unsustainable trade deficits" for oil importing countries. For some countries, such as Brazil, Turkey, and India, oil imports ab-sorb over 50 percent of export earnings, the report said. Last

THE DISTORTION OF AMERICA

O SCAR HANDLIN. the Harvard historian, calls in a "passionate and polemical analysis" of recent history, thoogh it seems more like a furi-ous indictment. But however you characterize "The Distortioo of Amercharacterize - The Distortion of Amer-ica," is book constructed from a oum-ber of Prof. Handlin's recent essays that have appeared in Commentary. The Atlantic monthly, New Leader. The American Scholar and several other publications, there is enormous appeal to the everyice he undertakes appeal to the exercise he undertakes in it. And I'm not being entirely facetious, for, after all, who doesn't share Handlin's concern for what he de-scribes as the United States' loss of purpose and deteriorating position in the world today.

First, there's something perversely uplifting about being told that things were once much better. It gives the United States a sense of standards to be reminded that it used to be dedicated to the idea that the world was one, that it was to serve as an example to that world, and that any intercourse it had with foreign countries had oothing whatsoever to do with imperialism. (Handlin makes the point that, by the start of this century, the overwhelming bulk of U.S. foreign investment was tied up in Europe, Canada and Mexico, and that even the small portion committed to undeveloped areas such as Africa and Asia was mercantile rather than exploitauive.)

Then, it's reassuring in a way to learn that the United States' oppo-oents aren't doing very well — that Communism has "failed" and the countries that have tried to steer a neutral path have only succeeded in cootributing to the world's present instability.

Some Gratification

And finally, there's gratification of a sort in locating specific people and events to blame for the major ills that have befallen the United States - the Israelis, for example, for having uni-laterally put Eichmann on trial and thus allegedly setting in motioo the subsequent breakdown of international law. Or those who dissented with U.S. conduct in Vietnam, for having undermined U.S. credibility during the Paris peace orgoniations. Or the news media, for having failed to take Alexander Solzhenitsyn's Harvard commencement speech seriously enough. Or liberal intellectuals from Walter Lippmann on to the followers of Eugene McCarthy, George McGo-vern and John Anderson, for failing to keep faith with majority rule and

Solution to Friday's Puzzle

But the real beauty of the ooe's foot and condemnin past is that there's not realized past is that there's not really in you have to do about it. You have benefit of hindsight, Handlin Ferry ter of hindsight, particularly with observes, apropos of Prendent in don B. Johnson's conduct of the fer-nam War, "only a few years there."

don B. Johnson's conduct of big the nam War, "only a few years inner death, he sank into despondings" if Johnson knew in 1968 would die in 1973. Or where he would die he would die in 1973. Or where he would die he would di tion of Richard Nixon but shock litical order incapable of remain their rowdy antics," when many would argue that it was the Nine ministration's judicial order that tually created Abbie Hoffman Chicago Seven.

You get the benefit of hittes but there's not much you can about what you see. As Handling cludes: "There is no turning back to clock of history. The dreams of the 1950s are gooe without prospection recovery. There are no means with the breathe life into the concepts of as ecuve security and interne law.'

Of course, you now know what to do the next time there's a Vietne War to win, whatever the sacrifice a a shah of Iran to support, becau you've learned to distinguish because a ruler who is more-than-less and like the shah, and one that is much than-less evil. like the Aynore Rubollah Khomeini. The only traile is, history doesn't tend to report the in quite the precise circumstances the permit the application of lesson learned in the past. This, some would argue, is why the United States false in Vietnam: because the lesson of Manich didn't work in a complex false al situation.

So all you have left to do after read so all you have left to do after reading "The Distortion of 'America''s nod, sigh "How true!" square some shoulders and follow Handhirs and ple prescription for the "proper en-ployment of the interval" unit "Some et clumsiness" gives the free world " respite to discover equivalents the concepts of collective security and international law."

This "proper employment" "de mands abandonment of illusions in recognition of necessity, pumuit of the possible not of the ultimately desiable. It requires also recognition by the free world of its own identity at the absolute moral differences that separate it from the totalitation as gimes with which it shares the give. And the time left will be wasted upon those who fail to understand that they inhabit one world with others and must summon up the will to defeet values from the past that are still visit for the future." In short, let us be vigilant.

It often happens that the most sensational play in a tournament is pro-duced not by the winners, but by those whose overall result is mediocre or worse. Perhaps this is because a player finishing out of the money feels player timisning out of the money teels free to take chances or wants to show the world what he can do in one bril-liant performance to make up for his lost games. But this year, the players on both teams will be rolling for higher stakes: to woo the fans back to baseball. With that in mind, the executive council of the big leagues decided to resume the season with a nationally televised "showcase." regardless of the risks. And one official recalled that Commissioner

Pair of 66s Puts Nelson Atop PGA By 4 Over Zoeller

By Dave Kindred Washington Post Service

DULUTH, Ga. - Sure, Acworth is a tiny dot on the map, 45 minutes west of here on old Highway 41. "But it's blacktop all the way," Larry Nelson said, smiling a touch

Old 41 soon may be the yellow brick road to the PGA champion's home as another 66 Saturday gave Acworth's unpretentious pro a four-shot lead over Fuzzy Zoeller with 18 holes to go.

What Nelson did Saturday was thrilling, for he not only made six birdies in a nine-hole stretch, but be also knocked down the flags coming home. This was a target gallery, with 16 of the 78 players breaking par, but no one was wired more keenly than Nelson, who made putts as long as 30 feet and came to feel infallible.

From the 18th fairway, looking across a pond on a hole that is 463 yards of pure fright. Nelson picked out a target to line up his three-iron shot. "I was aiming at a guy in a red shirt in the ABC tower." Nelson said, "and it would have come down right on his head."

At 8 under par on rounds of 70-66-66-202, Nelson ued the PGA

He's a millionaire many times over, even before the Leonard fight. He has 11 cars, be has a Jouse worth $1.5 million in Panama, which is worth like $3 million in the United States. Should be have been like Willie Classen, who fought when he was sick and died? The money aspect means nothing." Duran says now, "I will fight Leonard for nothing." Pride is as much a part of Duran as is an inring brawl. He says now, in what for him is a sincere tone, "f am hurt by what people talk of me."

This hurt seems to have done something to Duran that oo boxer - including Ray Leonard - has ever dooe. It has put Roberto Duran on the defensive. "Duran wants the public to know the person they saw in New Orleans in that second Leonard fight was not the same Duran who fought the other 73 fights," Henriquez says. "In the first couple of Latins and we have a different culture," Henriquez says. "In Latin America if a guy touches you, you fight until you bleed or die. If you are burt and you can avoid death in such a situation, you get out. Here in America it's different. If Sugar Ray had gotten beaten up and was having physical troubles like Duran, he would not have come back ever. Roberto is proud and he wants to redeem himself." Still, the taunting goes on. At a public workout here last Wednesday, a member of the crowd of 500 or so screamed insults at Duran. This man, who spoke Spanish, was as effective with his insults as Duran's sparring partner was ineffective with his punches. After each round, Duran would yell back at the teen-ager, who continued his verbal attack. Finally, after the sparring ses-sioo was done, Duran charged toward the heckler. Four men had to restrain him.

In other words, if the Yankees' Newark farm took such a long lead that not even the illusion of championship competition survived, Newark would be declared champion of the first half and a new mering ett i race would begin with everybody starting equal. As long as there are teams like Toronto and San Diego in a league, there is no feasible way to have a winner or contender in every city but this is the next best thing. To be sure, it is bush, but if it means an extra dollar at the box office, club owners will fall in love with the system. Some, no doubt, will favor continuing the split-season-cum-playoffs permanently, al-though the league presidents, Oath Feeney and Lee MacPhail, masted the plan was for this year only and several owners made the same promise.

There are more than a few unappetizing aspects of the plan. The Except on Sundays, all games will be at night, of course. That's the way television wants it and that's how subservient Bowie Kuhn will rule, even if Montreal should make it all the way. In the intemperate autumn of the North Temperate Zone, night games in October and November are a travesty on baseball and a punishing imposition on the cash customers. They get great Nickens, though.

As for the element of suspense, four divisional half-championships were decided by June 12, though nobody knew it at the time. The half-champions are the Yankees, A's, Phillies and Dodgers. At least four contenders were cheated. They are the Rods, who were only half a game behind Los Angeles when the strike started; the Cardinals, a game and a half behind Philadelphia; the Orioles, two games behind the Yankees, and the Rangers, a game and a half be-hind Oakland

Now those challenges to the divisional leaders are gone, rubbed out, kaput.

Already assured of a place in the playoffs, the Yankees, Dodgers, A's and Phils have no incentive to hustle through August heat and September fatigue. Recognizing this fact, George M. Steinbreuner 3d has already warned potential goldbrickers on the Yankees of his

Revolting Prospect

Still, a team has nothing to gain by winning both halves, because then the resident bushers will fetch up a seam of losers for opponents and sell tickets to a divisional playoff that is totally unnecessary. The double winners will have to play the losing scam with the best won-lost record over the whole

Not only does the split season encourage "jaking" - as players used to call shirking - by four teams, but as Cincinnati's Dick Wagner has pointed out, a firsthalf winner could be in a position 20.677.

Letter From Switzerland The Postcard View

By W. Joseph Campbell

FRIBOURG, Switzerland -I Switzerland's picture-postcard beauty is disappearing as alpine chalets fall victim to highrise buildings and highways, Swiss environmentalists contend.

Hans Weiss, the director of the Swiss Foundation for the Care and Protection of the Landscape, said he figures that "at least half of the country's scenic spots have lost some or all of their original beauty forever, mostly to the forces of de-velopment. If it continues, the beautiful lakes, mountains, and scenery will be known just on calendars."

The old town here in Fribourg has been preserved, but clustered on the bluffs high above the orange-tiled roofs of its Gothic homes is a maze of white-faced apartment buildings standing like an ill-chosen frame around a masterpiece painting.

Studded with church spires and crisscrossed by narrow cobble-stone streets that open onto expansive squares, Fribourg's old town nften has been cited as a particu-larly memorable example of Goth-ic architecture. Census-takens a few years ago identified more than 1,200 dwellings that date from the Middle Ages.

The apartment houses stand as an example of what many Swiss environmentalists maintain is the decline of picturesque Switzerland. The country, they assert, has paid aesthetically and environmentally far the development that has paralleled the country's affluence.

"There are still picture-postcard parts of Switzerland, but they are getting fewer and fewer and you have to go farther and farther to find them," said Lee M. Talbot, director general of the Swiss-based International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources.

'One Big Village'

Evidence of that conflict is readily present along the heavily popu-lated plateau arching from Geneva to Zurich between the Alps and abandoned late last year while still on the drawing board. "The reason the Jura mountains. To some, the plateau in broad sections resembles a city without boundary, development without interruption, "It's like driving through one big village, from Zurich to Geneva, particularly Zurich to Bern," said Roland Wiederkebr, a World

Wildlife Fund-Switzerland official The largest Swiss cities - Zu-rich, Basel, Geneva, Bern, and Lausanne - have been losing population steadily. In the past dec-ade, their aggregate population de-clined by 128,700 persons, or 11.6 percent. Suburban and rural areas, on the other hand, have generally registered firm gains, and metro-panding network of major high-ways. Nearly 33 percent more new cars were put into circulation in 1979 than in 1970, federal government figures show. There are nearly 2 cars for every 5 residents.

The major roadway network in Switzerland, which is about twice the size of New Jersey, now covers more than 725 miles; in addition, 174 miles of superhighway are being built, according to Interior Ministry statistics. Startling Changes Inevitably, the landscape has been reshaped. "It can be startling to compare photographs of some areas taken in the 1950s and 1960s with those taken today," Weiss said. The World Wildlife Fund-Switzerland was particularly critical of the construction of the 10.1-mile highway passage through the St. Gotthard massif in south-central Switzerland. The two-lane tunnel was hailed as an engineering masterpiece when dedicated last September after 10 years of work. The tunnel, designed to cut northsouth driving time by two hours, has proved incapable of accommodating heavy vacation traffic. Weekend traffic jams as long as 4.5 miles have been common since the summer vacation season began

Environmentalists have not been totally without victories in protecting the landscape. Weiss led a five-year campaign against plans to build a rotating restaurant at the Jungfraujoch,

11.336 feet up in the Bernese Oberland, "It was a clear contradiction," Weiss said about the project,

PEOPLE: Carter Threw In the Towel As Mrs. Reagan Wore One

Nancy Reagan says she was only wearing a towel and President Reagan was in the shower when President Jimmy Carter threw in the towel on Election Day last No-vember. She told Family Circle magazine, "I had just gotten out of the tub, wearing nothing but a towel, when I glanced at the TV set. Then I shouted, 'Ronniel' He dashed from the shower, also wrapped in a towel, and together we watched in astonishment as President Carter conceded the election to him, so early that the polls in the West weren't even closed. There we were, standing there, each clutching our towels, trying to take in the amazing truth that he would be president and I first lady." ... Meanwhile, White House officials say the Reagans are taking routine precautions to avoid contracting bubonic plague, traces of which were found recently in dead rats near the Reagans' California ranch. Larry Speakes, the deputy White House press sec-retary, said there was little concern retary, said there was little concern among Reagan and his aides, who were told the plague incidents be-fore the president started his vaca-tion at the ranch last week. The Santa Barbara County Health De-partment has advised residents of the Santa Ynez Mountains area to tack their trousers into their boots and to avoid handling dead ani-mals, but there have been no evacuations. The so-called black plague, which devastated Europe in the 14th century, is transmitted by fleas that generally attack small animals.

Of all the letters he receives from children who read his books, says Reald Dahl, about 80 percent say they love the gory parts of his stories best. Dahl said that a case in point was "James and the Giant Peach," a story about a boy who found a huge peach and sailed it across the ocean to America. The tale ends with two of the boy's evil aunts crushed to death when the peach rolls over them. In letters from children, again and again they express sentiments such as "the bit I liked best was when the aunts get squashed by the peach," Dahl said in an interview on Mar-tha's Vincyard, Mass., where he and his wife, actress Patricia Neal, are vacationing. * * *
